

FURTHER DANGER OF SLIDES AS RAIN CONTINUES

Residents Moving Out of Homes on Hillside— Water Pouring Down

Danger of additional slides loomed over Juneau and vicinity this afternoon as rain continued to fall, though in apparently decreasing quantities. Residents were moving out of many houses on the hillside between the district back of the Gasineau Hotel and the Alaska Juneau mill. Water was pouring down the various streams and cracks were reported in the earth in several places. The long, persistent rain has loosened the earth from bedrock, workmen stated.

While ceasing for a time this morning, the rainfall in November up to midnight last night had reached 20.31 inches and between 10 p. m. Saturday and 10 p. m. Sunday 3.89 inches fell. The previous record for November is 20.51 inches in 1890 and indications this afternoon were that the 1890 mark would be surpassed.
